3.2 PRENOTAZIONE UN ALBERGO: Comprehension Task

In the space provided, detail the conversation between signora Monti and the Direttore in English.

Mrs Monti is visiting Venice. She is searching for a hotel room but, regrettably, has not booked ahead. Mamma mia, Signora!!

She asks the concierge if there is a double room. He tells her that, at the moment, all the rooms are occupied, however, there will be a vacancy after ten o'clock. The concierge enquires how long she would like to book the room? "Three nights," says Mrs Monti.

Naturally, Mrs Monti wishes for a room with a bathroom - none of this "sharing" business for Mrs Monti!! Luckily, there is such a room on the third floor.

Being low season, Mrs Monti can stay for only 60,000 lire, per night. "Very well, I'll take it!" she cries, almost leaping into the concierge's arms and showering him with kisses.

Down to business, though, and Mrs Monti presents her passport to secure a key to Room 7. The concierge hands it over with a knowing wink. Mrs Monti leaves her bags to return after ten. "No problem," oozes the concierge
